Disturbing?

WASHINGTON - (UPI)

Administration officials are disturbed by the possible political repercussions of a Centra Intelligence Agency (CIA) do cument which contains an implication that a compromis with the Communists may even tually be necessary in the Soutivict Nam power struggle.

Top-level officials are at tempting to make it clear that the CIA report — which declares at one point that victor over the Communists is doubtful and that a "neutralization deal may be called for — doe not represent U.S. policy.

The 45-page paper, prepare by Willard Matthias of CIA' board of national estimates attempts to assess development in various parts of the worl within the framework of the Soviet-American power relationship.

It was written carlier this year. It has been circulated among various government agencies with a notation that it had "general approval" of the CIA board, which had however, made no attempt to reach complete agreement on every point of it.

The political implications of the report are obvious, inamuch as Republican presidenticandidate Barry M. Goldwate is charging the Johnson administration with a "no-win" for leign policy.

Administration officials s

they want to emphasize that the paper has never been presented to or considered by President Johnson's National Security Council or the top level U.S. intelligence estimate board.

Official sources disclosed the existence of the document when they learned it had been offered for publication as a major outline of American policy. They asserted that this was not true and that the ideas were, as one official put it, "only one man's opinion."

Aside from the Viet Nam neutralization reference, the document appeared to be a routine summary of the obvious changes brought about by the nuclear stalemate between Russia and the U.S., complicated by the Red Chinese-Russian ideological conflict.

The portion of the document on South Viet Nam which apparently touched a sensitive, administration nerve said:

The counter-guerrilla effort continues to flounder, partly because of the inherent difficulty of the problem and partly because (the last President Ngo Dinh) Diem's successors have not yel demonstrated the leadership and the inspiration necessary.

"There remains serious doubt that victory can be won, and the situation remains very fragile. If large-scale U.S. support continues and if further political deterioration within South Viet Nam is prevented, at least a prolonged stalemate can be attained.

"There is also a chance that political evolution within the country and developments upon the world scene could lead to some kind of negotiated settlement, based upon neutralization."
